ABSTRACT

Background: Theological and socio-religious scholarship in Indonesia has experienced rapid development in recent years. Many academic journals have emerged to address issues of theology, Christian education, ethics, interfaith relations, and digital transformation. However, the need remains for a structured overview that maps these publications to better understand the direction of Indonesian theological discourse between 2020 and 2025.

Purpose: This study aims to compile and analyze a comprehensive bibliography of Indonesian theological and socio-religious journals published from 2020 to 2025. The goal is to identify key trends, thematic focuses, and interdisciplinary connections within theological research and practice.

Methods: The study employs a bibliographic and qualitative content analysis approach. Scholarly articles from five major journals—Journal of Religious and Socio-Cultural, SERVIRE, QUAERENS, Indonesian Journal of Religious, and MODERATE—were systematically reviewed, classified, and interpreted based on their theological, educational, and social relevance.

Result: Findings reveal an increasing integration between theology and contemporary social realities. The data indicate a growing interest in contextual theology, digital ministry, Christian ethics, and the application of biblical studies to societal transformation, reflecting a shift toward practical and interdisciplinary engagement.

Contribution: This bibliography contributes to the mapping of Indonesian theological and religious scholarship and serves as a valuable reference for academics, educators, and practitioners. It helps identify research gaps, encourages collaboration among institutions, and promotes the growth of contextual theology in both Indonesian and global academic settings.

Keywords: theology; Christian education; religious studies; biblical Studies; ethics; church Leadership; interfaith dialogue; community service; digital theology; Indonesian context
